Attic Treasures Sale Benefits Greater Lewes Community Village

Posted: Sep 1, 2018 9:08 PM By Mallory Metzner

sale brings a variety of objects to the table and the lawn to find new owners. It's all to benefit a non-profit organization

The Greater Lewes Community Village is on a mission to help older adults live independently as long as possible

"We do that through volunteers. The fundraising allows us as any business to run the business but most importantly to have programs that get people out of their homes, get them to engage with one another, stay socially engaged, which as a by-product really improves people's health," says Executive Director Jacqueline Sullivan.

Jackie Finer got a group of people together back in 2010 to found the non-profit. She adds,"I think the main thing is helping people like me who live alone be safer in my house until I'm much older I hope and need medical attention, this is something that helps me get through the Planning for the Village began in 2010 and it is now part of over 200 villages across the country. Volunteers are what make the Village and events like this possible.

Steve Hanzel is both a board member and volunteer. He says, "We start collecting furniture the first of June and over a three-month period. We collect art, knick-knacks, different things, furniture, and we store it here at the Brush Factory and then we have our one-day Attic Treasures sale on the Saturday of Labor Day weekend. It's always the Saturday of Labor Day weekend."

From artwork to furniture, sports equipment, and more the Attic Treasures sale has something for all kinds of buyers to find and 100% of the proceeds go towards the Greater Lewes Community Village.

Everything up for sale is a donation. Each year the items that don't sell are donated again to other nonprofit organizations.
